OBSERVATIONS

Back to Routine

The official vacation season is over. When the omniverous public school system opened its great mouth to swallow the youth of the land, mothers began to pack up their bedding and their bridge decks and commenced their trek homewards. Anxious eyes are scanning mirrors to see the havoc wrought by the changing weather on the hard-earned "tans" on cheeks and brows. And poor husbands who had tired of pinochle and restaurant food and hectic week-ends are now contemplating the joyousness of a repast at the family board, and a house that does not reek of camphor balls, and the snugness of the yoke of domestic routine.

Autumn has blown its chill breath and behold normalcy has fallen like a mantle over the surface of society! The disturbance caused by the strange indulgences in summer whims has subsided. Moons and breezes and star-lit evenings and splashes of scenery - these will be forgotten. The high-spite fence of duty will stand before one's eyes in its drabness, and obstruct visions, and obliterate horizons, and check flights of imagination.

SELICHAS

Once when the writer was a very young lad he persuaded an indulgent parents to allow him to attend the midnight service of "Selichas" at an extremely Orthodox synogogue. The setting and the performance—a dingy house of worship, a group of old, white-bearded Jews, shaking and swaying amid trembling shadows, reciting and chanting in mournful tones the soulful prayers of a sad people—left an impression on us which time has not effaced.

People still go to Selichas. We dread taking a chance on visiting a synagogue during these services. We wish to cling to our idealized notion of what Selichas are. Seeing the performance now might ruin a perfectly sweet illusion.

NUMBERS

Who would not be a citizen of Toronto at this time of the year when the glorious annual Exhibition is being staged in all its magnificence! Every morning we pick up the newspaper and discover that the attendance figures are continuously growing. What joy! There are innumerable features about the Exhibition that make it a truly marvellous affair. The new types of milking machines, the art gallery programmes, the souvenirs in the Pure Food building, the speeches delivered by successful sprinters and politicians, the Jewish sandwich booths—these are sights and attractions worth anyone's while taking in. But the crowning glory of the Exhibition is the greatness of its attendance. Not so long ago it was the ambition of the directors to have the turnstiles click a million times during the two weeks. Now the figures have more than doubled. And it is within the power of everyone of us to help build up the great mass who enter the gates of the Fair.—A.B.B.

A HOLY DAY SERVICE OPEN TO ALL

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

It is impossible for the regularly established synagogues to accommodate all who desire to worship on the high holy days. Preferences for synagogue seats are awarded to members and to those who pay for such seats. While the ideal arrangement would be for all synagogues to have all seats free at all times, the time for that has not yet arrived. Nor will it arrive until rich individuals endow synagogues, or until other ways of financing them are discovered. In every community there are some parasites -individuals who take all and give nothing. Some of these parasites are in evidence during the holy day season. They have refused to maintain a synagogue all year, though they can well afford to do so, and they are noisiest in making demands of the synagogue. For these we have no sympathy.

There are, however, in every community many folks who cannot meet the synagogual membership fees, though anxious to do so. To these the community has an obligation, and also to visitors and to strangers. Holy Blossom Synagogue, anxious to provide everyone who desires to worship with the opportunity to do so, and unable because of lack of room to accommodate all in the synagogue building, is following the precedent established last year, and is arranging for Annex Services which will be open to the public.

This year the large and commodious Pythian Castle Hall, 247 College Street, near Spadina Avenue, has been secured for these services. Members of the Holy Blossom Alumni will take charge. A choir is being trained under the direction of C. C. Smith, organist of the congregation. Even preachers will be found among the young people, some of whom will deliver the sermons at the services. Last year these services were crowded. It was a pleasure to hear with what dignity and sincerity the services were conducted by young men and how enthusiastically the audience responded. Again these services will be carried on on a high plane, and the public will be welcome to worship. Holy Blossom will not only turn no one away who desires to worship, but by establishing this annex service, is providing an opportunity for Jewish leadership and service to its young people.

SIR JOHN MARRIAT AND CANADA'S IMMIGRATION PROBLEM

We were at Hart House last Saturday night at the dinner given to the visiting Parliamentary Delegation by the Province of Ontario. On our right sat Sir Thomas Glasgow of Australia, and on our left sat the Hon. Mr. Nosworthy, postmaster-general and minister of external affairs of New Zealand. Close by sat Sir John Marriat, for many years a professor of history at Oxford. Sir John was to be the speaker of the evening and we anxiously awaited his words.

Sir John warmed us with his initial words. We felt that we were listening to a historian and not to a politician- a man above mass prejudices and without mass hokum. Sir John referred to the French element in Canada, spoke of its contribution to Canadian

WORLD UNION FOR PROGRESSIVE JUDAISM HOLDS SESSIONS IN BERLIN

About eighty delegates, Americans constituting the largest majority, gathered last Saturday in Berlin, at the opening session of the International Conference of the World Union for Progressive Judaism. The leader of the movement, Dr. Claude G. Montefiore, presided at the opening session which was held in the evening, when reports of the progress of the Union were submitted by delegates from Germany, Sweden, England and America. Dr. C. Seligman, Rabbi of Frankfurt and president of the Union of Liberal Rabbis in Germany, delivered the sermon on Saturday morning at a special service arranged in honour of the delegates.

In his report of the progress of reform Judaism in Germany, Dr. Herman Vogelstein, of Breslau, declared that the Association for Liberal Judaism in that country comprises thirty-seven organizations, which have a membership of about 8,000. He urged the conference to adopt a definite stand toward Zionism and not be afraid to express its attitude toward a question that is engaging the interest of all Jews at present. Dr. H. G. Enelow, president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, pointed to the progress of liberal Judaism in America, as revealed by the large number of new temples built and the increasing numbers of pupils in the Sunday Schools of the reform congregations. He also indicated that the reform mode of procedure has been copied to a large extent by the middle group in American Jewish religious life, the so-called Conservatives, although they still refuse to identify themselves completely with the reform movement.

Dr. Henrick Wolff pictured conditions in Sweden, where the main problem is that of intermarriage, since the state law makes it obligatory upon the contracting parties to bring up their children in the state religion, unless a definite agreement has been drawn up by them before marriage. Dr. Mattuck, the Rabbi of the Liberal Synagogue in London, also mentioned the fact of the increase of intermarriage, although he was more optimistic on this point, because in his experience, the non-Jew of the union often became a loyal Jew or Jewess.

In addition to the delegates from America, England, France and Germany, there were expected Mr. Leon Bergman, of Warsaw; Mr. A. Klebanow, of Vilna; Dr. Fritz Feifer, of Polish Silesia; Rabbi Keskemeti, of Oradea Mare, Rumania; Dr. Stern, of Saaz, Czechoslovakia; and Dr. Ziegler, of Carlsbad.

INNOVATION ATTAINS QUICK POPULARITY

Tried as an experiment in providing extra comfort for night travellers, the single-room sleeping cars on Canadian National trains between Toronto and Montreal quickly reached tremendous popularity.

So completely has this new travelling convenience met a long-felt want of the travelling public, that these cars now operate on both the ten and eleven o'clock trains to Montreal.

Each room in the single-room sleeping cars is tastefully decorated. It provides every toilet requisite, has hot and cold running water and ample space for baggage on the racks and under the bed. Deep springs and soft mattresses make travelling as comfortable as sleeping at home.

The popularity of this Canadian National service makes it advisable to arrange for reservations early. Full particulars and reservations from any Canadian Nationa lagent.

SUMMER TRAVELLERS APPRECIATE "THE CONFEDERATION" SERVICE

Review Contributing Editor Says Communism Failed in Russia

"Russia has failed in communism. They have not got a communistic government. They have failed to realize thus far the theories of Carl Marx and what you have there to-day is state capitalism," declared Rabbi H. J. Stern, rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, Westmount, who returned to Montreal after spending a summer in Soviet Russia, touring with a party under the auspices of the Society for Cultural Relations with the Soviet.

"Labour is the only wealth," said Rabbi Stern. "The state is the custodian of the common good. Workers are the only recognized citizens, and the interesting thing is that there is no grading of men on the basis of economic power. There are no social classes."

On his way back from Russia Rabbi Stern attended a gathering of the World Union for Progressive Judaism held in Berlin, under the presidency of Dr. Claude G. Montefiore, head of the English Jewish liberal movement. At the conference the consensus of opinion was that liberal Judaism is essential to come between the casting away of old orthodox beliefs and the danger of widespread indifference and atheism which might follow.

Concerning Russia Rabbi Stern stated that the outside world is ignorant of what is going on there. Most people forget that Russia up to 1917 was a feudal country 500 years behind the rest of Europe. To-day Russia is moving from the agricultural to the industrial stages in development. But even so it is 200 years behind such countries as Germany and the United States, for it is just beginning to conquer an 85 per cent. illiteracy among the masses which existed under the czar and which, Rabbi Stern said, was stimulated by a church steeped in superstition.

"To-day a valuable experiment in the field of political and economic organization is taking place. Russia is a vast laboratory, from which will come, in time, momentous discoveries in government and social relationship. The founding of the republic is one of the most important events of modern times.

"The world owes to the Soviet the saving of Russia as an organized entity. It saved Russia from any possibility of the recurrence of the old regime, and it established a workers' republic, a society of those who toil."

The rabbi went on to point out that while all this is valuable, communism pure and simple has failed, and there has been a modification of Marxian principles. As one opposed to the dictatorship of the proletariat, which the Russians are trying to emphasize, Rabbi Stern said that there is bound to be still a further shifting from first principles.

The attitude towards religion in the Soviet was deprecated by the Rabbi who felt that there was no emphasis of moral standards or of human conduct. They have converted church and synagogue into social clubs and this is a thing that will have to be stopped, he said. Religious education will yet come back, and tendencies in this and other directions are already to be noticed. The administration is steadily becoming more conservative. The present attitude towards religion is the outcome of the great reaction against the established church of the czar. Religious education is prohibited although it is carried on privately. A member of the communist party dare not have membership in any religious organization.

"All this will adjust itself in due time," said the Rabbi. "As it stands individuality is destroyed and they are already beginning to realize the importance of private enterprise.

"The world must hold out sympathy to the stricken, struggling people of the Soviet Union," Rabbi Stern said. "For while the Bolsheviks have made mistakes, the world should nevertheless develop a sympathetic understanding and should try to help them make their contribution to civilization. The Soviets are firmly and permanently established."

Questioned concerning propaganda of the communists Rabbi Stern said: "What the world must do is to leave Russia alone and what Russia must do is to leave the world alone. It is true that their fanaticism at the outset led to their desire to spread their doctrine but they are beginning to realize better."

Rabbi Stern and the party he was with had the opportunity of viewing the Soviet in all its aspects. He was profoundly impressed with the educational system there, stating that it is based on the latest scientific methods and that many American authorities are now there studying the Russian system. While he was there John Dewey, eminent philosopher, from Columbia University and a party of forty U.S. professors were closely observing the educational system.

The Berlin conference Rabbi Stern said, had emphatically indicated that progressive Judaism is marching onward in all countries of the continent.

After the Jewish holy days in September Rabbi Stern plans to deliver a series of ten lectures at Temple Emanu-El on Soviet Russia.

JEWISH NATIONAL AND UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

The library received from Jacob Raskin, a gift of great value, i.e., a collection of socialistic pamphlets, dating from the end of the nineteenth century. Almost all Russian and German Socialist leaders have contributed towards this collection. Amongst the pamphlets are included many rare first prints.

Abraham Almaliach presented to the library three manuscripts, one of these being a letter which the rabbis of Tunis sent in the year 1863, to the Alliance Israelite, describing the sufferings of the Jews in Tunis and appealing for assistance. The two other manuscripts are letters written by the Ashkenazio Rabbis in Hebron in 1827. These deal with the sending of delegates of the Hebron community to the Diaspora. It is interesting to note that it is mentioned therein that they are sent with the consent of the Sephardic community.

Charles L. Richards, vice-president of the American Association of Museums, presented to the library all his writings on the relationship of art to industry and craft.

Samuel Guy Inman, secretary of the Committee on Co-operation in Latin-America, presented the library with all his writings dealing with American problems.

Reinhold Cohn presented the library with a collection of books on sociology and chemistry.

Professor D. Heller, Budapest, sent to the library a collection of works of Hungarian Jewish authors.

Emanuel Hertz, of New York, presented to the library, the valuable work, Poli Synopsis Criticorum Scripturae, London, 1671, in five volumes.

history. He pointed out additionally what every scientific thinker knows, that foreign elements in any country are desirable. They enrich and lend variety to the national life. They prevent provincialism. He spoke about mongrel peoples. A short while ago a Canadian ecclesiastic dedicated to the love of his fellowmen and supposed to be imbued with ideals of humility and kindliness, aroused the peoples of the West by referring to Canada as mongrel and Australia as British. Whether Sir John heard this ecclesiastic's words or not, he answered them well. The British constitute a mongrel race and this British historian named about a dozen races, Saxons, Danes, Romans, Celts, Normans, Huguenots, etc., who had been fused to produce the modern Britishers. Sir John was speaking like a scientist and we enjoyed it. But then—I shall quote:

"Canada will some day have hundreds of millions of people. The capital of the empire may be shifted to this continent. I hope that eighty per cent. of these people will be British and the other twenty per cent. of the less favoured peoples." (Laughter).

Here is where Sir John and science parted company. If Canada is even within a few centuries to have hundreds of millions of people, it will have to get them from non-British peoples. No leap of the imagination could picture a situation which would enable enough immigrants to come from Great Britain so that Canada would have eighty million Britishers. If Canada is ever to have such a large population, and its economic resources will warrant it, that population must come from the crowded lands of Europe and Asia.

Again, when Sir John speaks of less favoured peoples, he is unscientific and unchristian. Anthopology knows no superior nor inferior peoples. It recognizes only advanced and backward peoples, and the advance of a people is due merely to accident of history and environment, and not to inherent superiority. That is science's verdict. And Sir John is unchristian for we do not believe that Jesus of Nazareth would distinguish between favoured and less favoured peoples. Aye, if we understand his life correctly, then if there were less favoured people, he would have wanted to be with them and of them. To speak disparagingly of hundreds of millions of God's children is unworthy of sound and intelligent statesmanship.

And lastly, Canada will retain British loyalties with immigrants of non-British stock as long as the children of these immigrants will attend Canada's public schools where British ideals will be inculcated. The public schools mould the patriotism of children, and if Canada in a spirit of religion and generosity, would open her gates to the oppressed and persecuted of all races, she would find that in one generation the immigrants' children trained and reared in the public schools will prove to be loyal Britishers and as their brethren before them, they will be ready to lay down their lives for their new country. Thousands of graves in France with foreign names in British cemeteries prove that these words are truth. We have had enough hysteria and jingoism in our immigration discussions. Let us let in the pure air of science and get some much needed ventilation.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancour
That for what it cost me to be free
I might have had an anchor."

A Jewish gentleman writes to say that the leading topic of the day should be the establishment of an international sabbath which Jew and Gentile could observe as the common rest day—and what does "Every Friday" think of it? This column loses its natural apathy for a moment and brightens up in the face of many difficulties but not for long. How picayunish it is for a man to ask that just one sabbath be observed as a day of rest! There are already two fairly recognizable sabbaths and there should be more if reformers only had the zeal for rest days that human beings should have. A reformer with a broad sweep and lavish hand would suggest that the week be moved out at both ends and a few sturdy rest days inserted at frequent intervals. If time is fleeting it is also endless and there should be enough days left in the universe to allow for more sabbaths than can now be discerned. This column commits itself to the celebration of the bigger and better sabbath, especially for such climates as this where the season is short for lying on the sand in the sun in a state of mental vacuity. By better sabbath this column means one on which people who want to meditate and pray may do this without disturbing people who want to play golf, gambol or gamble on the green, go to the movies, weed the garden, stay home from church and just rock or do anything a person can do without trampling on the rights of others. This column favours peace, bread and freedom for all men and always has. It now deserves recognition at home and abroad and decorations from foreign governments for its breadth of view on the sabbath question. Let every other day in the week be a rest day with banks closed, weather fair and warmer!

The editor of Israel's Messenger, Shanghai, China, didn't know the half of it when he began his long distance and recurring discussion with this column on the sunken state of American Jewish journalism. If he ever gets hold of a copy of the Western Jewish News of Winnipeg he will be hotter than ever on the subject, for that paper appropriates his editorials and, without changing more than a word or two, runs them as they are. Here is the most efficient way that has ever been devised by an editor for producing scholarly-sounding editorials, without effort, and "Every Friday" congratulates the Winnipeg editor on his ingenuity and —er— enterprise. This is a message sent with love from Toronto to Shanghai, and hopes for an early recovery!

As for immigration and the United States and Jews and the presidential election, Hoover favours the continuance of the present basis of determining racial quotas. This basis permits two per cent. of the number of foreign-born of each nationality who were in this country in 1890 to come in annually. Hoover wants this amended to overcome unnecessary hardships on families but he believes that the present quota basis is working very satisfactorily and should not be changed except as to more humanitarian considerations. Governor Smith objects to the use of census figures of 1890 as the quota basis of immigration. He wants the date raised to 1920 or to 1930, the next census. In commenting upon the Smith attitude Representative Albert Johnson, Republican of Washington chairman of the House Immigration and Naturalization Committee, said: "While the statement of Governor Smith may add to his vote in New York City, it will lose him many millions in the States that want America kept American." The two greatest issues in the coming presidential election are the prohibition and immigration problems. Smith is against prohibition and in favour of more liberal immigration. The Jews on the whole should have their candidate picked by now.

Because of reports pouring into the press of this country from all parts of Europe depicting catastrophe in the Jewish colonies in Russia, David A. Brown, national chairman of the United Jewish Campaign, has released a cable from Dr. Joseph A. Rosen, director of the Agro-Joint, telling of conditions in the colonies. Dr. Rosen's cable dissipates the rumours which Brown calls irresponsible. He says that he has just completed an extended trip over the colonization districts. He found: "Krivoy Rog district crops fair to good, approximating ninety per cent. Ica and Ort colonies adjoining Krivoy Rog district about the same. Crimea fair to excellent. Only area badly affected was the Cherson district where complete crop failure took place. Government, Agrojoint, Ica, Ort co-operating. Adopting various measures to relieve the situation, heaviest part of expenses to be borne by the government." This cable from such an authority should set at rest any anxiety over such news as American papers have carried this year from time to time about the killing of Jewish farmers by enraged peasants and various stories attempting to reveal government connivance at wrong-doing toward Jews on the part of the Russian peasantry. Mr. Brown thinks that it is evident that there are forces in Europe which are fundamentally opposed to the Russian colonization movement and are spreading false rumours. One objection to disturbing gossip set afloat is that it takes too much time and energy from the colonization work itself for the investigation into the truth of these malicious reports. Thinking Jews must see that Russian colonization is one of the main solutions to the problems of the Russian Jews. It is a pity if any of them with other axes to grind lend themselves to efforts that make more difficult the great work of settling Jews on the land in Russia.

At Her Grave

By S. GOLDBERG

The boy living in England knows not how happy he is; at least until he is sixteen years old he is free of all care; but it is not so in Russia. There his future is decided when he is eight or nine years of age, and if he then manifests remarkable ability in Talmudic lore, he is sent to the Seminary at Telz, Volozin or Slobodka to fend for himself. If the head of the Yeshibah finds him very clever, he will see that he is boarded with seven different families during the week—true, it is generally with good families. The question of where he shall sleep does not arise, for it is taken for granted that he sleeps in the Synagogue, where sleep hundreds of others, on benches, on the bare boards, sitting at the tables, anywhere, anyhow. If, on the other hand, the head of the Yeshibah considers him only mediocre, he is lucky to be provided with four or five days' board; for the rest of the week he has to do the best he can for himself, and generally he manages quite well, if the good lady (and how good some of them are, themselves going without food in order to provide some for the poor boy—how different from our present-day charitable, aristocratic ladies!) has pity on him, and instead of asking him to supper, gives him a kopeck or two. He will then go without any supper and keep the money for a rainy day! If the worst comes to the worst, he can always schnor some potatoes and roast them in the big oven!

And yet these boys made our literature, and so contributed to world's literature and science as they are to-day. Zederbaum, Slonimsky, Mapu, Smolenski, Lilienblum, Gordon, Friesman, Klausner, "Achad Ha'am," Bialik, Sokolow, Weizmann—all went through the same university of life. This was all very well if the boy showed aptitude for learning, but if he did not, he was at once apprenticed at the tender age of nine years to a cobbler or a tailor, and then life for him was a veritable hell. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is nothing in comparison!

Smerka, or, as he was later called, "The Socialist," could remember only one happy day in the whole of his childhood, and that was when he was five years old, his poor mother wrapped a Talith around him and took him for his first lesson at the Cheder. Two or three kopecks fell on the table, and he was told that they were thrown by an angel from Heaven, and that later on, if he were good, the angel would throw him some more. (Is there a mother to-day who takes such an interest in her child's spiritual well-being?) These were the first and the last kopecks that Smerka saw until he reached the age of seventeen!

When Smerka was but nine he was apprenticed to a cobbler, and not only had he to do the rough work at the bench, but he had also to do all the dirty work of the house. Of food he had very little, kicks plenty, not only from his employer and his wife, but also from their children, who seemed to delight in kicking him, which, however, did not satisfy them, for they would cry out that Smerka kicked them, which would bring him an extra dose from his employer. And gradually bitterness entered his soul, so that when he was eighteen years old and he started business for himself he looked at least thirty. His heart was full of hatred for the whole world when, at the age of twenty, knowing he would soon be called for military service, he decided to emigrate to England. Still, he left his little town with a heavy heart, as who would not? Who ever forgets? Even when we live in London, we still dream of our little town in Russia, with its little river, its beautiful walks, its woods and market place, where the cattle would be gathered in the summer before the shepherds drove them to the woods, and then in the evening they would return. . . . Ah, happy, happy dreams of childhood! But one thing Smerka noticed: with the exception of his father and mother, who shed bitter tears, no one saw him off. His feeling of bitterness increased. Why had the whole town seen Reb Chaim off? Was not he (Smerka) as much a human being? Had he ever harmed anybody? He had worked hard and earned his living in an honest manner, why should there be this difference? All these thoughts haunted him when he arrived in England and began to work. For the first time he heard of Socialism, and he joined a Socialist club. He became a Freethinker, and mocked at everything religious, but he was not a fool. After a time he opened a little business of his own and did very well; and then the war broke out and he became rich. His hatred of the world, his hatred of religion still remained, and when someone suggested his marrying Reb Chaim's youngest daughter, the idea appealed to him. What greater revenge could he have than to marry the daughter of the once richest and most respected man in his native town?—he who had been looked upon in that town as if he were dirt. What would they say in his little town when they heard of it? He, the little cobbler, the son-in-law of Reb Chaim? So he agreed and Reb Chaim also agreed; for, after all, we live in England, and Mr. Smuelovitz (no longer Smerka) was a rich man, and his (Reb Chaim's) daughter would be rich. She would dress like a lady, live in a grand house, and perhaps his son-in-law would do something to help him in his financial trouble. It was said that Smuelovitz was a miser and not fromm; but never mind, he would be different after he married. And so the young couple became engaged. She was an only child and only seventeen years of age, innocent as a babe and knowing nothing of the world. Her father stood next to God in her heart, and when he wished her to become engaged she became engaged; but when her fiancé was with her she was unhappy, although she did not know why. She did not know why her heart almost ceased to beat when he touched her, but she consoled herself with the thought that perhaps one had to feel like that. She imagined her mother must have felt likewise when she was engaged to father and they married. A year afterwards she died. . .

It was a terribly hot day; but just as the sun was setting a slight breeze began to blow, and a heavenly stillness reigned in the graveyard, as only it could reign there. A solitary figure was walking to and fro, passing and re-passing a tombstone bearing the inscription: "In memory of my wife, who died at the age of eighteen years."

The whole of his past came back to him—his childhood, the little town where he was born, the miserable little house, his slavery and drudgery at the cobbler's bench, the leaving of the little town for the golden land, his bitter struggle here, his throwing off of the religious yoke, his becoming rich, his marriage to her and his treatment of her. Poor child, when she used to nestle close to him he would put her aside and tell her not to be so childish. His common cobbler's nature failed to understand her refined soul. Incident after incident came to his memory—how on the first Friday night after their marriage she lighted the Sabbath candles, and when he returned from business she greeted him with, "Good Shabbos!" but he did not answer her, and instead walked to the candles and blew out the lights. She cried the whole night long, cried as if her heart would break. But had he cared? Not in the least; his sole aim and object being to break her to his will, to his ways. On Yom Kippur she went to shool and he to his Socialist club, although she begged and prayed that he would not. She promised him anything and everything, but he only laughed. That night she did not go home; she was afraid—aye, bitterly afraid—that he would even outrage her innermost womanly feelings. Had he not done so often enough in spite of her tears and sobs? Ah, what a beast, what a brute he had been! How could he have acted so towards this child? Where was his manhood? After the last incident she fell ill and lay for weeks without uttering a word; but the doctor said there was nothing radically wrong with her, only a sort of depression which he could not understand. She took the prescribed medicine, but it did her no good, she was simply wasting away, fading like a flower that was torn from its stem and roughly handled. She died!

When the groundkeeper went to the graveyard in the morning, he found him still there with his head resting on the tombstone, his hair dishevelled and talking to himself. There was a vacant look in his eyes; for all practical purposes the world was dead to him!—London Jewish Chronicle.

RENEWED CAMPAIGN AGAINST RELIGION IN RUSSIA

The renewal of a bitter campaign against the Jewish religion by the Jewish communists, the Evseks, is reported from Warsaw. An eye-witness, who has been on a visit to the Polish capital, relates that the confiscation of synagogues is going on apace throughout Russia, at the instigation of the Jewish communists. Some of these synagogues have been turned into moving picture places. All books, excepting prayer-books, are removed from synagogues and sold as wrapping paper. The prosecution of all who are suspected of teaching Hebrew to children is followed with greater severity than ever before. These renewed activities on the part of the Evseks has called forth the protests of Smidowitch and of Lunacharsky, the commissars of religion and education respectively, but the authorities apparently support the Evseks in their pernicious propaganda.

The Soviet authorities of Charkov issued an order that all who do not belong to the labouring classes must vacate their homes and give them over to members of the proletariat. It is estimated that this will affect more than 5,000 Jewish families who will have to leave the city altogether, since there are no other dwellings available. It is also indicated that nearly 12,000 families of Jewish labourers will benefit by this order, but it is said that even the working men who will profit by the order are not very enthusiastic over it, realizing the injustice that will be done to their brethren.

MAIL BOX

NO SMALL CARDS, PLEASE

Owing to the approach of your national celebrations, we thought it best to inform you that for some time the Post Office Department has endeavoured to discourage the use of small cards and envelopes, for the following reasons:

1. On small cards and envelopes, the Post Office cancellation mark frequently falls on the address, partially obliterating it, with the possibility that the article may be misdelivered or at least delayed.
2. In cases where it is necessary to redirect mail in order to reach the addressee, small cards and envelopes do not provide sufficient space.
3. There is a greater possibility of loss of small cards and envelopes, owing to the fact that they are apt to fall out of bundles in which they are tied.

Under circumstances, may we ask that you kindly reproduce in your paper, if possible, the above mentioned notice, for the benefit of your readers. Might we suggest that you repeat same occasionally.

VICTOR GAUDRY,
Postmaster of Montreal.

The failure of nearly 75 per cent. of Jewish high school students in Rumania to pass their examinations is attributed to the desire on the part of the Ministry to limit the number of Jewish students in the colleges.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

For free copies write: G. A. ELLIOTT, Director of Colonization, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ontario.

You Are Invited

THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW invites you, oh friends and subscribers in the smaller cities and towns of Canada! You are among those invited to send in news of your family, friends, community, cause. (The rules are that the writing or typing must be easy to read with lots of white space between the lines just to humour the poor old editor.) Whenever there are communal or social doings, see that someone present is delegated to send an account to THE REVIEW with the names of every soul. Then watch for the news in print. If you have to borrow THE REVIEW to see it there's something seriously wrong. If you are not a regular subscriber think how negligent you have been. Rectify that error at once and subscribe for THE REVIEW now and forever. THE REVIEW links up the Jewish communities of Canada and brings them close together over long distances. TOURISTS PRAISE THE LAKE AND RAIL ROUTE TO WEST

Summer travellers to Western Canada are enthusiastic in their praise of the boat trip from Sarnia to Fort William, where the Northern Navigation boats connect with the Canadian National Railways boat train for the West.

There are exclamations of delight from those travelling over this route, at the excellent meals, the very roomy decks and splendid dancing floor.

They say that the thoughtfulness of the social hostess makes the journey just like a big house party where everybody has a joyous time.

Deck sports aplenty are arranged for the guests who desire them. For those who desire rest and leisure to read, there are dozens of sunny nooks about the decks. In the evenings a peppy orchestra provides dance music for all who enjoy the thrill of dancing on board boat.

The lake route is an ideal way to add to the pleasure of your journey to the West. Make your reservations early from Canadian National ticket office.

In Vienna, where a socialistic government has been priding itself on the suppression of intolerance, there has just come into being an organization that intends to combat all Jews and Christians unwilling to subscribe to the principles of the anti-Semitic party. The major aim, according to a manifesto just issued by this group, is to "banish Judaism from Austrian political spheres"

THREE BIG LITTLE WORDS

HAPPY NEW YEAR

AT the advent once more of the High Holidays comes the beautiful Jewish custom of sending New Year's Greetings to one's relatives and friends. This custom, originated by the Jewish people, is thousands of years old. In ancient Judaea the town crier would carry the message to the dwellers in the villages and the cities, to the country-folk gathered in the towns to celebrate Rosh Hashonah in the traditional manner.

With the flight of time the honourable profession of town crier disappeared. But the deeply rooted custom among the Jewish people of sending "L'Shono Tovu" greetings remained. And there gradually grew up a custom of sending personal greeting cards through the mails. Many of these cards were works of art, and are treasured as heirlooms to this day.

When cities and towns were small, and one knew one's friends intimately, this system worked perfectly. But as cities grew, and one's circle of friends extended, it was inevitable that in the hurly-burly of sending hundreds of cards, some cherished friends were overlooked. The endless explanations and heart-burnings caused the development of a new and better system.

Extend your NEW YEAR GREETINGS to your relatives and friends through the SPECIAL NEW YEAR EDITION of THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW to be issued Friday, September 14th.

Fill out the coupon and return to THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW, 288 St. James Street, Montreal, or 319 Bay Street, Toronto, before Monday, September 10th.

The charge for these announcements is $2, payable in advance.
